

Dealing with Diverse and Difficult Students

Some accommodations I will make for diverse and difficult students would be; changing the way I would approach a lesson and present content; increased time and number of chances to work on assignments; or more teacher assistance. Also, students that are struggling would receive extra attention when I would be teaching a lesson, but the most common type of accommodation I will provided would be extra chances and help to correct mistakes on assignments I would provide these types of accommodations to anyone who needed them.

Students that have auditory or visual problems I will put them where they are best fit in the classroom. In my classroom I always want to be thinking about how I can help students.
